Lubbock Day
Sen. Robert Duncan
Jan. 27, 2009

"Lubbock Day was an outstanding success. It came at the very beginning of the session - when hope is still alive for all members of the Legislature - and before we have really started debating the tough big issues.

The gallery today in the Senate was full of representatives from the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, Leadership Lubbock, and other leadership positions in our community. This is one of the largest turn-outs we have had for Lubbock Day since I've been serving in the Texas Senate. We had opportunities to visit with our constituents in the Lubbock Day activities throughout the last two days.

We had an outstanding reception that was attended by many other members of the Legislature, both House members and Senators and their staffs, at Stubb's Barbecue, which everyone famously associates with Lubbock, Texas, and Joe Ely, and other great artists that performed there from time-to-time, who are all from Lubbock. It was an outstanding success. I thought that the members, at least the comments that were made to me, were favorably impressed with not only the constituency that we represent from West Texas, but also with how successful Lubbock and West Texas has been over the years.
